“Scratch the surface of any major corporation or organization and you’ll find a BEEPER.”

Black Executive Exchange Program (BEEP) is a voluntary partnership between the NUL, corporate America, government, non-profits, and other institutions to loan African-American executives to participating colleges as "Visiting Professors." Visiting Professors lecture in credit-bearing courses that correspond to their industries and participate in other BEEP-related activities such as networking sessions, workshops and mock job interviews. BEEP’s mission is to share learning experience across generations, cultivate new leaders, and inspire achievements "beyond the possible" through committed involvement and operational excellence.

BEEP:

- Exposes students at four-year Historically Black Colleges and Universities (HBCUs) to working professionals in their fields of interest and through that direct contact familiarizes them with the demands and expectations of those industries.
- Prepares students to become the sophisticated and well-prepared employees that corporate America and its global competitors are seeking.
- Provides an opportunity for professionals and corporations, who are interested in giving back to communities, to help credentialed African-American college students achieve their goals.

WHO PARTICIPATES IN BEEP

BEEP’s roster includes business executives, as well as highly trained technical and creative persons. Equipped with hands-on experience, Visiting Professors provide students with the practical experience they need to complement their academic courses.

Well over 2,000 professionals have participated in BEEP to date. The program has gained the cooperation of more than 1,000 corporations, government agencies and professional organizations.

STUDENTS AND COLLEGES SERVED BY BEEP

- BEEP is the longest-running program in Urban League history.
- Created in 1969, BEEP has reached more than 750,000 students on the campuses of 84 Historically Black Colleges and Universities.
- BEEP alumni are represented in thousands of private & public sector organizations across the country.

BEEP is active at 84 four-year Historically Black Colleges and Universities and on the campus of the University of Nebraska at Omaha (UNO).
